I have heard some of the buzz that was going on a few months back about the new Do Follow Movement. However, I am just getting around to finding out what its all about.

It turns out that most major blogging platforms use a default "no follow" attribute for comments made on blogs. This means that if a person comments on a blog and leaves there website on the comment, their website wouldn't be recognized by search engines. By default, the comment that someone leaves is only visible to those who are viewing the page.

Joining the movement only means that you alter your blog by removing the "no follow" attribute.

Here's an article that explains in detail what needs to be done to become an "I Follow" blogger .

I've decided to go ahead and join in. This makes it more rewarding for my website visitors to leave comments. And on the same token it will help me as a blogger as it will add to the ranking of my websites.

Many bloggers are interested in getting more comments. Its nice to recieve feedback.

In fact, you can recieve all of my feedback by subscribing to MoneyGirls On The Interenet. I have it all set up for you, and I've already added a re-direct to my feeds .

Here's a list of the websites from Ms. Latina Renee Enterprise, LLC that are "I Follow" websites. (I'll get around to updating them all sooner or later)

- MoneyGirls On The Internet
- George Bush's Impeachment
- Deron's Adventures

- Ms. Latina Renee Enterprise, LLC

- Travel Blog for Busines

- Shoppin4Family Inc
- MsMoneyGirl en Espanol
- Top College List

- House Of Deron
- MeMoney In The City

I'm using the maxComments plugin for MsMoneyGirl.net. I'll have to find out if the comments links are nofollow or dofollow.

However, you may continue to use the comment feature here on this page or on the other pages that are listed.

Thank you for choosing MsMoneyGirl.net! If you like this post, do subscribe to recieve more of the same.
